Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.The recruiting sergeant asked me what I d been doing in civilian life, and I told him that I was assistant veterinarian, in Chilton County, Alabama, and had worked for Dr. Parrish, who was the country veterinarian. So he immediately put me in the medics. There was some sense in that, because in World War I and World War II, medics treated men and any animal. We treated horses and dogs, and the medics manual showed anatomies for men and horses. We just gave bigger doses of medication to horses. The Army had cavalry, until 1941 when the cavalry became mechanized. As we approached the last few hundred yards, we began to draw intense small arms fire, as well as mortar and artillery fire, from a couple of concealed bunkers. We got off in the water waste or chest deep for some guys, and we had so much equipment on some of the guys started sinkin , And we were drawin tremendous amounts of small arms fire, some mortar fire, some artillery fire to. Almost as soon as...
