Excerpt: .was summoned. Their negotiation here required mere address; for a great many of the leading men were disaffected to the Romans, and entirely devoted to the interests of Antiochus and the jEtolians; because, at the time when accounts were received that Philip s son, who was a hostage, would be restored to him, and the tribute imposed on him remitted, among other groundless reports it had been given out that the Romans intended to put him again in possession of Demetrias. Rather than that should take place, Eurylochus, a deputy of the Magnetians, and others of that faction, wished for a total change of measures to be effected by the coming of Antiochus and the jEtolians. In opposition to those, it was necessary to reason in such a manner that, in dispelling their mistaken fear, the ambassadors should not, by cutting off his hopes at...
